PROGRAM OVERVIEW

In small groups, students shadow and volunteer in community-based settings, including health clinics, hospitals, schools and social service agencies. In addition, we hear from local speakers on topics relevant to education, health and social services. We also participate in a variety of excursions, exploring the natural and social environment of this beautiful island. In this course, we discuss privilege and power in the context of race, gender and nationality. Through our observations, readings, reflections and debriefing, we explore the meaning of service in another culture as well as the role culture plays in service delivery. We also formulate a better understanding of our own ethic of meaningful service.
